Daily Multi-Asset Trading Blueprint & Level Execution Manual

Date: July 25, 2026

Session Highlight: New York Session Pre-Open Briefing (Approximately 1 Hour Before Open)

Session News Focus: Wall Street pre-market movers, US Federal Reserve news, mega-cap US stocks (NVDA, MSFT, TSLA), and WTI Crude Oil catalysts.

SECTION 0: DAILY MACRO & FINANCIAL NEWS DIGEST

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- The European Central Bank (ECB) signaled a possible September rate hike, citing upside risks to inflation, particularly from rising oil prices and geopolitical tensions in the Middle East, having held rates steady in July.
- Uncertainty surrounds the US Federal Reserve's upcoming July meeting decision on interest rates, with markets leaning towards a September hike, though cooling June consumer inflation data provides room for a potential hold.
- US 10-year Treasury yields have reached new 2026 highs, hovering around 4.70% to 5.00%, contributing to a strengthening US Dollar.
- The ECB has initiated the onboarding process for non-euro area central banks to its enhanced repo facility (EUREP), aimed at supporting monetary policy transmission and bolstering the international role of the euro.
- The US is imposing new tariffs ranging from 10% to 12.5% on imports from 60 global economies, as President Trump rebuilds his tariff wall.

2. US & European Markets

- Wall Street futures exhibit mixed sentiment in pre-market trading, with S&P 500 and Dow futures showing slight gains, while Nasdaq 100 futures are down.
- Mega-cap technology stocks, specifically the "Magnificent Seven," have experienced a significant sell-off, wiping out an estimated $787 billion in one session, as investors discount future earnings heavily reliant on AI adoption.
- Tesla's stock dropped 18% following a Q2 operating profit miss of $1.3 billion, highlighting earnings risk in high-profile growth names.
- Intel (INTC) is a pre-market gainer, rising over 3% due to strong Q2 revenue and robust AI-driven guidance. Nvidia (NVDA) is scheduled to report earnings on August 26, and Microsoft (MSFT) on July 29.
- European markets, including the Stoxx Europe 600, FTSE 100, CAC 40, and DAX, are showing positive movement, supported by finance and tech sectors despite new US tariffs and elevated oil prices.
- Early Q2 earnings season reports show 83% of S&P 500 companies topping EPS estimates, with resilient performance in defense, consumer demand, and core financial services.
- There is an observed rotation in investor capital towards mid-caps, value, and commodities, and away from large-cap growth and high beta assets.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- Indian equities concluded the week in negative territory, with benchmark indices Nifty and Sensex experiencing five consecutive days of losses; Nifty fell 2.33% and Sensex declined by 2,091 points.
- Banking stocks, including HDFC Bank, Axis Bank, and Kotak Mahindra Bank, faced heavy selling pressure amid earnings disappointments and concerns that higher crude oil prices could impact credit growth and asset quality.
- Key drivers for the market downturn included a crude oil shock, escalating West Asia tensions, broader risk-off global cues, and persistent foreign institutional investor (FII) outflows.
- Prime Minister Modi's speech on May 10, 2026, advocating for reduced fuel consumption, postponement of foreign travel, and avoidance of gold purchases, triggered a sharp fall in benchmarks and increased volatility, leading to thematic de-risking in certain sectors. Consumer discretionary and durables stocks saw declines, while electric vehicle (EV), power, and domestic manufacturing sectors outperformed.
- The Indian Rupee weakened, and FIIs sold shares worth Rs 4,111 crore for the fourth consecutive session.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- Crude Oil: WTI Crude Oil is trading near $90-$100 per barrel, with Brent crude holding above $100 per barrel, driven by ongoing West Asia tensions, attacks on Red Sea tankers, and risks to supplies through the Strait of Hormuz. Global transport disruptions are now replacing supply as the key risk factor.
- Gold: Gold's recovery has stalled due to the confluence of rising 10-year Treasury yields, a strengthening US dollar, and escalating Middle East tensions. Gold is increasingly viewed as a monetary policy and geopolitical risk instrument rather than primarily an inflation hedge. Institutional forecasts for end-2026 range from $4,742 to $4,916 per ounce, with J.P. Morgan taking a more aggressive view at approximately $6,000 per ounce. India's gold demand saw a 10% year-on-year increase in Q1 2026, driven by investment demand.
- Crypto: The bipartisan CLARITY Act is seen as a potential catalyst for institutional crypto growth in the US by providing regulatory clarity, with XRP highlighted as a significant beneficiary. However, President Trump's substantial crypto holdings (estimated at $1.4 billion) are reportedly stalling his own proposed crypto legislation due to perceived conflicts of interest. Bitcoin is trading around $64,006, while Ethereum ETFs are attracting significant inflows ($103.9 million), even as Bitcoin ETF inflows have slowed. Banks are advocating for the CLARITY Act to address AML gaps and prevent stablecoin yield offerings from eroding bank deposits.

STRATEGY-BASED DAILY TICKER SELECTION & SECTOR CONSTRAINTS

INDIAN EQUITIES (STRICTLY LONG-ONLY)

Ticker	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
Tata Motors (TATAMOTORS)	Long	Selected as a Nifty leader benefiting from PM Modi's push for domestic manufacturing and electric vehicles (EVs). Anticipating a 50-SMA support bounce or a 20/50 EMA golden cross, fueled by positive policy tailwinds.
Larsen & Toubro (LT)	Long	Leading infrastructure player poised to benefit from India's domestic growth focus. Assumed 20/50 EMA golden cross indicating strong underlying momentum.

US EQUITIES

Large-Cap (BI-DIRECTIONAL)

Ticker	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
Microsoft (MSFT)	Long	Anticipating a 21-day EMA pullback following the recent tech sell-off, presenting a potential buying opportunity ahead of its Q4 fiscal 2026 earnings on July 29, which are expected to show continued AI and Azure growth.
Tesla (TSLA)	Short	Weak Q2 operating profit results, missing forecasts by $1.3 billion, are likely to exert continued downward pressure on the stock, aligning with a 50-day SMA rejection strategy.
Intel (INTC)	Long	Strong pre-market performance (up over 3%) driven by robust Q2 revenue and optimistic AI-driven guidance, indicating positive momentum.

Mid-Cap & Small-Cap (STRICTLY LONG-ONLY)

Ticker	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
CrowdStrike Holdings (CRWD)	Long	Representative mid-cap in the cybersecurity sector, which is experiencing sustained demand. Assumed Stage-2 VCP breakout or high Relative Volume (RVOL > 2.0) indicating strong investor interest and upward momentum.

CRYPTO FUTURES (BI-DIRECTIONAL)

Ticker	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
XRP/USD	Long	Bullish catalyst from the potential passage of the CLARITY Act, expected to clear regulatory uncertainty and boost institutional adoption, aligning with a high-volume volatility breakout.
ETH/USD	Long	Continued strong institutional interest evidenced by significant Ethereum ETF inflows ($103.9 million), suggesting positive market sentiment and potential for 4H 21-EMA trend following.

COMMODITIES (BI-DIRECTIONAL)

Ticker	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
WTI Crude Oil	Bi-directional	High volatility and persistent geopolitical drivers, including Middle East tensions and risks to transit routes like the Strait of Hormuz, present opportunities for swing trading around established Pivot and Fibonacci extension levels.
Gold (XAU/USD)	Bi-directional	Conflicting forces of a strengthening USD and rising Treasury yields (downward pressure) versus geopolitical safe-haven demand (upward support) suggest bi-directional trading opportunities around key pivot and Fibonacci levels.

FOREX FUTURES (BI-DIRECTIONAL)

Short-Term

Pair	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
EUR/USD	Short	Anticipation of a stronger US dollar due to ongoing Fed uncertainty (potential for future rate hikes) and current rate differentials, coupled with risk-off sentiment.
GBP/USD	Long	Rising UK consumer confidence and a bullish forecast from Rabobank (1.32 target) suggest potential for short-term upward momentum.

Macro Carry Swings

Pair	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
AUD/USD	Long	Potential for a return of risk-on sentiment in global markets and underlying support from commodity prices in the medium term, offering carry potential.
USD/JPY	Long	Japanese Yen stabilizing near multi-decade lows and the significant yield differential with potentially higher US interest rates make USD attractive for long-term carry.

INDIAN OPTIONS (BI-DIRECTIONAL)

Ticker	Direction	Strategy & Selection Reason
Nifty 50 / BankNifty Futures	Bi-directional	High intraday volatility is expected given the recent market declines, geopolitical tensions, and broader macro uncertainty in the Indian markets, making 15-Minute Opening Range Breakout (ORB) strategies highly applicable for both Call (Long) and Put (Short) positions.
