SECTION 0: DAILY MACRO & FINANCIAL NEWS DIGEST

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- The US Federal Reserve's September meeting minutes are slated for release this week, with investors keenly awaiting insights into future interest rate adjustments, particularly after recent weaker-than-expected US jobs data has considerably reduced the probability of an October rate increase.
- Money markets are currently pricing in only an 18% chance of an October hike, a significant drop from the previous 70%, though a December hike remains anticipated.
- Financial conditions are showing signs of tightening, with money market rates exceeding 3.90% and the bond market experiencing a continued selloff, while the S&P 500 has lost ground since late August.
- Concerns surrounding France's fiscal challenges have led to a widening of Eurozone bond-yield spreads, and India's central bank decision is also a focal point due to elevated energy prices.
- The Federal Reserve Board has announced an extension of the comment period for its proposal to modernize Regulation O until November 4th.

2. US & European Markets

- US stock futures are mixed to lower, with S&P 500 and Nasdaq 100 futures declining, while Dow Jones futures indicate slight gains.
- Despite mixed futures, equities in Asia rallied on Monday, buoyed by "Goldilocks" US jobs data that alleviated fears of immediate rate hikes and boosted tech-focused markets.
- Notable pre-market movers include WISESat.Space Holdings Corp (SAIQ), which saw a significant surge, and PTC Inc. (PTC), also experiencing strong gains.
- Mega-cap technology leader Microsoft (MSFT) received an upgrade to "Buy" from Melius Research, with a price target raised to $665, driven by strong demand for AI security solutions; the company is scheduled to report its Q1 FY2027 earnings on October 27th.
- Generally, AI chip stocks such as Nvidia (NVDA), Intel, Broadcom, and AMD have exhibited positive pre-market movement, fueled by robust AI spending.
- The semiconductor industry is witnessing advancements in AI for chip design and a growing demand for high-bandwidth memory (HBM), with reports indicating Samsung is seeking more than triple HBM prices for 2027.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- While real-time FII/DII data for today is not yet fully available, prior trends from October 1st, 2026, suggest that Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) exhibited a bearish stance on indexes but were bullish on individual stocks.
- Conversely, Domestic Institutional Investors (DIIs) demonstrated bullishness on indexes and increased their call option purchases.
- FIIs and DIIs collectively account for approximately 35% of investment activity in the Indian Stock Market, highlighting the significant impact of their capital flows.
- India continues to present an attractive investment landscape for FIIs, driven by its high growth prospects and anticipated increase in disposable income.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- WTI Crude Oil prices experienced a sharp decline on Monday, trading near $90 per barrel, attributed to profit-booking, signals of weaker global demand, and soft US economic data reducing geopolitical risk premiums.
- The Group of Seven (G7) agreed to release up to 100 million barrels of emergency stocks, and President Trump ruled out a US diesel export ban, contributing to WTI's downward pressure.
- OPEC+ producers have decided to maintain November oil production targets unchanged; however, actual output remains below quotas due to ongoing disruptions from the US-Iran conflict.
- Gold (XAU/USD) is recovering some losses and bouncing from two-month lows, currently positioned around $4,141-$4,143, though it faces headwinds from elevated US Treasury yields and a strong US dollar.
- Central bank gold purchases remain a notable driver of global gold demand.
- In the cryptocurrency sector, the past week has been marked by "massive crypto adoption and regulatory progress".
- The US Senate successfully passed the GENIUS Act for comprehensive stablecoin regulation, which has now moved to the House.
- The SEC has put forth new crypto custody rules aimed at providing clearer regulatory pathways for investment advisers and funds, and major Wall Street institutions like Morgan Stanley are actively expanding into digital assets.
- Both the SEC and CFTC are actively developing crypto market infrastructure, with new rules broadening access for custody and advisers.
