Date: October 5, 2026

Current Session Highlight:  New York Session Pre-Open Briefing (1 Hr Before Open)

Session News Focus: Wall Street pre-market movers, US Federal Reserve news, mega-cap US stocks (NVDA, MSFT, TSLA), and WTI Crude Oil catalysts.

SECTION 0: DAILY MACRO & FINANCIAL NEWS DIGEST

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- The Federal Reserve raised its target rate by 25 basis points to 3.75%-4% on September 16, the first rate hike since 2023, and further signaling one more hike this year.
- Odds of an October Fed hike fell to about 14% after a weaker-than-expected September employment report, where nonfarm payrolls rose just 29,000 against an expectation of 84,000. The unemployment rate ticked up to 4.2%.
- The euro has started the week under renewed pressure, with EUR/USD falling near 1.1160, its weakest level since May 2025, largely due to concerns over French government finances and widening sovereign yield differentials. France's borrowing costs have climbed to their highest levels in over two decades, with 10-year OATs testing 5.00%.
- The GBP/USD exchange rate fell to 1.3220 on October 5, down 0.16% from the previous session, and has weakened 2.37% over the past month, with technical indicators showing a bearish short-term momentum.
- The Bank of England held its Bank Rate at 3.75% on a 6-3 vote on September 17, but expectations of further tightening have increased among investors.

2. US & European Markets

- US equities were mixed for the past week, with the Nasdaq Composite Index gaining 0.6% and the S&P 500 Index slipping 0.3%. Wall Street ended higher on Friday as market participants assessed the weaker-than-expected labor market data and monetary policy expectations.
- NVIDIA (NVDA) shares continue their bullish trend, trading near $233.95, up over 3% in the last 24 hours, and reaching a new all-time high of $238. The company is now valued between $5.64 trillion and $5.7 trillion, making it the most valuable company globally. Strong AI chip sales, reaching $96.2 billion, more than double from last year, and a planned $235 billion share buyback are boosting investor confidence.
- Microsoft (MSFT) shares are trading higher, around $526.25, after Melius Research upgraded the stock to 'Buy' with a $665 price target, citing the company's cybersecurity offerings and potential benefits from AI fears. Microsoft is seen as a key player in the shift toward enterprise AI, with strong demand for Azure cloud services.
- Tesla (TSLA) stock rebounded and is trading near $370.59, showing over 4.65% gains, after reporting stronger-than-expected Q3 deliveries of 486,532 vehicles, beating analyst consensus. Despite the delivery beat, concerns about profitability and increasing competition in the EV market persist.
- Pre-market movers include PTC (+37.50%) after Schneider Electric agreed to acquire it, and RXO (+21.0%). Intel (INTC) was among the losers, down 3.92% in pre-market.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- Today's time in India is 02:14 AM (October 5, 2026). *Note: Specific real-time Indian market news (Sensex/Nifty updates, FII/DII flows, corporate earnings) for today's session is not extensively available in the provided search results given the early morning timing in India.*
- The Opening Range Breakout (ORB) strategy is popular for intraday trading in Nifty 50 and Bank Nifty, often utilizing the first 15-30 minute candle to identify entry, stop loss, and target rules.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- WTI Crude Oil is trading near $89.40, down roughly 2%, while Brent is near $102.10. Oil prices remain elevated due to supply and shipping risks tied to ongoing Middle East conflicts. The G7 group of nations agreed to release 100 million barrels of diesel and other reserves, which initially led to a sharp sell-off in the oil market to a low of $88.06. ConocoPhillips chairman expects the oil price floor to rise to around $70/bbl.
- Gold outlook suggests elevated downside risks due to inflation, oil, and yields.
- Bitcoin rebounded after a period of poor performance, with prices rising above $87,000 due to increased corporate and institutional interest in US spot Bitcoin ETFs.
