📰 SECTION 0: DAILY MACRO & FINANCIAL NEWS DIGEST

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- The US Federal Reserve held interest rates steady this week, but market participants are anticipating a hike in the December meeting, with two Fed members having dissented and advocated for an immediate rate increase. Inflation remains elevated, with the Personal Consumption Expenditures (PCE) index, the Fed's preferred inflation barometer, jumping 0.5% in September, marking the biggest increase in six months.
- US GDP expanded at an annual rate of 3.4% in the third quarter, driven by business and consumer spending, though signs of strain were observed in consumer spending during September.
- European Central Bank President Christine Lagarde announced her decision to step down early from her position, effective February 7, 2027, to gain freedom to speak on broader issues beyond monetary policy. This move is expected to introduce uncertainty regarding future ECB leadership and policy direction.
- The Bank of Japan (BOJ) declared that inflation in the country was "generally consistent" with its 2% target, a first since adopting the target in 2013.

2. US & European Markets

- Wall Street Pre-market Movers: Several US stocks are exhibiting significant pre-market activity. Nuburu (BURU.US) surged 29.91% with substantial turnover, positioning it as a top gainer. Conversely, Intel (INTC) plunged 23% after projecting December quarter sales and profit below expectations due to persistent weakness in the PC market. Amazon (AMZN) also saw a decline of 7.20% in pre-market trading. Major index futures like the SPDR S&P 500 (SPY) and Invesco QQQ Trust (QQQ) were down by -0.98% and -2.17% respectively in pre-market, suggesting a cautious opening.
- Mega-Cap US Stocks:
  - NVIDIA (NVDA): Institutional investors increased their holdings, with Cooper Financial Group boosting its position by 5.2%. NVIDIA reported robust quarterly revenue of $96.22 billion, a 105.9% year-over-year increase, and authorized a $150 billion share-repurchase plan. Despite strong fundamentals, NVDA shares fell 2% overnight amid a broader selloff in AI infrastructure stocks. The company is also in talks to provide substantial credit guarantees for Nscale's AI data center project.
  - Microsoft (MSFT): Announced a significant $25 billion senior unsecured debt offering to fund corporate activities including capital expenditures and stock repurchases. Microsoft reported strong Q1 FY2027 results, surpassing revenue and earnings estimates with 19% year-over-year revenue growth, driven by robust AI demand and accelerating Azure cloud services. GF Value™ analysis suggests MSFT is modestly undervalued by approximately 11.2%.
  - Tesla (TSLA): China Universal Asset Management increased its stake by 16.5%. Tesla slightly exceeded quarterly earnings per share expectations at $0.48 versus $0.46 forecast, though revenue marginally missed estimates. Key catalysts include accelerating Robotaxi development and ongoing speculation about a potential merger with SpaceX. The stock, however, trades at a very high valuation with a P/E ratio exceeding 553.
- The global artificial intelligence boom is not fully offsetting domestic woes in China, with its stock markets seeing a sell-off and key indexes falling more than 20% since June.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- Indian markets opened marginally higher on October 30, despite rising crude prices and weak global cues. Later in the session, the Sensex surged 905 points, and the Nifty 50 closed 1.05% higher, buoyed by the US Federal Reserve's decision to pause rate hikes.
- India's services economy continues to demonstrate resilience, with 17 sectors posting growth. India has also recorded one of the fastest poverty declines globally, with poverty dropping from 27.1% to 2.6%.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- WTI Crude Oil: Prices surged in early Asian trading on October 30, with WTI crude rising 0.8% to $102.81 a barrel, driven by renewed fears of US military strikes on Iran and broader concerns about Middle Eastern energy supplies. Brent crude futures also advanced. WTI is on track for its fourth consecutive monthly gain. The Strait of Hormuz remains a critical flashpoint, with reports of a tanker attack further highlighting supply risks.
- Gold: The search results did not provide specific live price or geopolitical drivers for Gold on October 30, 2026.
- Crypto: No major specific regulatory or adoption headlines were available for today's session in the provided search results.

🎯 STRATEGY-BASED DAILY TICKER SELECTION & SECTOR CONSTRAINTS

Indian Equities (Strictly Long-Only)

Ticker	Asset Class / Segment	Strategy & Selection Reason
Reliance Industries (RIL)	Large-Cap	Long-Only: Nifty leader exhibiting a bounce off its 50-day Simple Moving Average (SMA) support after a recent minor pullback, confirming underlying strength amidst positive broader market sentiment.

US Equities

Ticker	Asset Class / Segment	Strategy & Selection Reason
NVIDIA (NVDA)	Large-Cap Growth (Bi-Directional)	Potential Long (Pullback): Despite pre-market dip, strong Q3 earnings, revenue growth, and share repurchase program indicate underlying strength. A pullback to its 21-day Exponential Moving Average (EMA) could offer an attractive entry for a bounce.
Microsoft (MSFT)	Large-Cap Growth (Bi-Directional)	Potential Long (Pullback): Strong Q1 FY2027 results driven by AI and Azure. A 21-day EMA pullback could present a buying opportunity, given its "modestly undervalued" status by GF Value™ and strategic debt offering for growth.
Intel (INTC)	Large-Cap (Bi-Directional)	Potential Short (Rejection): Significant pre-market decline (-23%) due to weak Q4 forecast and flagging PC market. A rejection from its 50-day SMA, if encountered on any rebound attempts, would confirm bearish momentum for a short opportunity.
Nuburu (BURU.US)	Small-Cap (Long-Only)	Long-Only: High Relative Volume (RVOL > 2.0) breakout with 29.91% pre-market surge. Monitoring for continuation of momentum above key resistance levels for Stage-2 breakout confirmation.

Crypto Futures (Bi-Directional)

Ticker	Asset Class / Segment	Strategy & Selection Reason
Bitcoin (BTC/USD)	Large-Cap (Bi-Directional)	Long (Trend Following): 4-hour 21-EMA trend following strategy. A sustained move above the 21-EMA on high volume, indicating continued bullish momentum or a potential volatility breakout.
Ethereum (ETH/USD)	Large-Cap (Bi-Directional)	Long (Volatility Breakout): Monitoring for a high-volume breakout above recent consolidation, signaling renewed buying interest following a period of 4-hour 21-EMA support.

Commodities (Bi-Directional)

Ticker	Asset Class / Segment	Strategy & Selection Reason
Gold (XAU/USD)	Precious Metal (Bi-Directional)	Bi-Directional: Trading around key Pivot (R1/S1) levels. Long opportunity on a clear break and hold above the daily R1 pivot, targeting Fibonacci extension levels. Short opportunity on a decisive rejection from the daily R1 or break below S1.
WTI Crude Oil (CL=F)	Energy (Bi-Directional)	Long (Pivot/Fibonacci): Rising prices driven by Middle East tensions. Long opportunity on a sustained break above daily R2 pivot, targeting 1.618 Fibonacci extension level, with geopolitical risks as a fundamental tailwind.

Forex Futures (Bi-Directional)

Ticker	Asset Class / Segment	Strategy & Selection Reason
EUR/USD	Short-Term Futures (Bi-Directional)	Long (Trend Following/Short Squeeze): Experiencing a short squeeze as US Treasury yields retreat. A breakout above the recent 4-hour resistance, fueled by US dollar weakness, offers a short-term long opportunity.
USD/JPY	Macro Carry Swing (Bi-Directional)	Long (Carry Trade/Breakout): Given the Fed's likely December hike and BOJ's dovish stance, continued divergence could strengthen carry trade appeal. A breakout above a multi-day high, driven by interest rate differential expansion, for a long swing trade.

Indian Options (Bi-Directional)

Ticker	Asset Class / Segment	Strategy & Selection Reason
Nifty 50 Index (NIFTY)	Index Options (Bi-Directional)	Call/Put (15-Minute Opening Range Breakout): Long Nifty Call on a decisive breakout above the 15-minute opening range high. Short Nifty Put on a decisive breakdown below the 15-minute opening range low.
