Session Highlight:  New York Session Pre-Open Briefing (1 Hr Before Open)

Session News Focus: Wall Street pre-market movers, US Federal Reserve news, mega-cap US stocks (NVDA, MSFT, TSLA), and WTI Crude Oil catalysts.

SECTION 0: DAILY MACRO & FINANCIAL NEWS DIGEST

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- Most US Federal Reserve officials anticipate another interest rate hike this year to combat persistent inflation, as indicated by minutes from their latest meeting. The Fed unanimously acknowledged that inflation remains elevated and has not made substantial progress toward the 2% target. A 0.25 percentage point increase was implemented in September, the first in three years, raising the key rate to approximately 3.9%. While October hike odds have decreased, a December increase is largely expected.
- The Bank of Japan (BoJ) shows hawkish signals with new policymaker Ayano Sato supporting gradual rate increases, contributing to a slight strengthening of the Japanese Yen. BoJ Governor Kazuo Ueda reiterated the commitment to raising rates in response to economic and inflationary conditions.
- Bank of England (BoE) policymaker Catherine Mann expressed concerns that inflation exceeding the 2% target is becoming embedded and could reach 4% by year-end, which initially supported the pound but saw it reverse lower today.
- India's foreign exchange reserves have declined for the fourth consecutive week, falling by $50 billion from their September peak. This follows interventions by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) to support the rupee amidst elevated oil prices, rising US Treasury yields, and foreign equity outflows.
- Global markets continue to be influenced by persistent inflation reports that remain above central bank targets.

2. US & European Markets

- Wall Street futures for the S&P 500, Nasdaq 100, Dow Jones, and Russell 2000 are all registering negative sentiment in pre-market trading, suggesting a cautious or downward opening.
- While there is no specific pre-market news for mega-cap US stocks like NVDA, MSFT, and TSLA, a general tech sector selloff has been noted, contributing to broader market weakness.
- Various smaller-cap stocks are exhibiting significant volatility in pre-market, with some showing substantial gains and losses. China SXT Pharmaceuticals Inc. (SXTX) surged over 140%, and Toppoint Holdings Inc. (TOPP) rose by nearly 120%.
- The S&P 500 notably retreated from its recent record highs in anticipation of the Federal Reserve minutes.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- Indian markets closed lower on Wednesday, with the Sensex declining by 429 points and the Nifty by over 173 points, ending a two-session rally. Investor sentiment was impacted by the RBI's rate hike and its measured tightening stance.
- Nifty earnings are projected to show a robust 27% increase in Q2, indicating the strongest growth in 17 quarters.
- Although specific FII/DII flows for today were not detailed, the RBI's intervention to support the rupee suggests ongoing foreign equity outflows.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- WTI Crude Oil has rebounded, supported by fresh geopolitical tensions in the Middle East, which also exerted pressure on some US Dollar peers. Technically, oil found support around its 50 EMA and the lower boundary of a rising channel.
- Gold (XAU/USD) retraced its recent gains and is trading near two-month lows, below $4,120, as the US Dollar appreciated ahead of the Fed minutes release. Gold found support around the $4,103 level, which corresponds to a 78.6% Fibonacci retracement. Key drivers for gold prices include real interest rates, Fed decisions, inflation reports, and currency fluctuations, often reinforcing its role as a safe-haven asset during economic uncertainty.
- In crypto regulation, the US Senate has passed the GENIUS Act, aiming to establish a comprehensive federal framework for stablecoin regulation. FinCEN withdrew proposed rules concerning convertible virtual currencies and unhosted wallets as part of a deregulatory initiative. Simultaneously, US states are escalating enforcement actions against crypto firms operating without the required licenses. The SEC has also put forth proposals to modernize transfer agent infrastructure for tokenized securities and a framework for investment advisors to self-custody crypto.
