Session: New York Session Pre-Open Briefing (1 Hr Before Open)

Focus: Wall Street pre-market movers, US Federal Reserve news, mega-cap US stocks (NVDA, MSFT, TSLA), and WTI Crude Oil catalysts.

SECTION 0: DAILY MACRO & FINANCIAL NEWS DIGEST

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- The Federal Reserve voted to hold interest rates steady at 3.5% to 3.75%, though the decision was not unanimous, with some officials voting for a hike due to inflation concerns.
- Fed Chair Kevin Warsh and Governor Christopher Waller have both indicated that inflation remains a concern and that the Fed may have "more work to do," suggesting a potential rate hike in the upcoming September 15-16 meeting if August inflation figures (due Sept 11) come in hot.
- The August jobs report showed the U.S. added 162,000 jobs, significantly surpassing forecasts, which could influence rate hike expectations.
- Yields on 10-year Treasuries fell slightly after Waller's comments, bringing down rate-hike bets to around 50-50 for September, but a hotter-than-expected nonfarm payrolls report could revive expectations for higher rates.
- US public debt has surpassed $40 trillion for the first time, with rising bond yields threatening borrowing costs.

2. US & European Markets

- US stock futures were mixed in pre-market, with S&P 500 futures up 0.1% and Nasdaq futures up 0.4% following positive sentiment from Waller's comments on Thursday. Dow futures were flat. Some reports, however, indicated lower futures earlier in the week due to rising global bond yields.
- Mega-cap US stocks showed varied pre-market activity:
 - NVIDIA (NVDA): Trading up +0.76% to +1.17% in pre-market, reclaiming the $230 breakout zone, with positive but not overbought RSI.
 - Microsoft (MSFT): Trading slightly down in pre-market (-0.00% to -0.02%). Technical analysis suggests a "Bullish Crossover" of the 20-day moving average, potentially signaling a trend reversal.
 - Tesla (TSLA): Trading down significantly in pre-market (-3.83% to -3.70%) following its Cybercab launch. TSLA is noted to be "trapped" between $350-$365 after a $381 rejection.
- Artificial intelligence-related stocks generally led European indexes higher, with ASML gaining 1.6%. Volkswagen also saw a significant jump (6%) after announcing plans to double job cuts.
- Adobe shares fell about 3.2% after-hours due to a new CEO appointment.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- Indian markets showed a rebound in early trade, with Sensex jumping over 530 points after a four-day slump, and Nifty 50 also slightly up.
- Foreign Institutional Investors (FIIs) were net sellers of ₹3,111.94 Cr in the cash segment on September 4, 2026, while Domestic Institutional Investors (DIIs) were net buyers of ₹8,930.12 Cr on the same day, indicating DIIs are counterbalancing FII outflows.
- Recent IPO listings like ESDS and Priority have seen strong listing day gains.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- WTI Crude Oil: Prices climbed significantly, posting its strongest weekly gain since mid-July (nearly 10%), settling at $91.48. This surge is primarily driven by renewed US-Iran hostilities and fears of prolonged supply disruption through the Strait of Hormuz.
- Gold (XAU/USD): Gold fell back on a stronger dollar but managed to hold above $4,500 a troy ounce.
- Crypto: The U.S. Senate passed the GENIUS Act, a bipartisan bill aimed at creating the first comprehensive federal framework for stablecoin regulation. This bill is now moving to the House. The SEC has also proposed "Regulation Crypto Assets" to establish a framework for certain crypto asset offerings, providing more clarity and flexibility. US Bitcoin ETFs reported the largest inflow day since January, worth $731 million. States are increasing enforcement against crypto firms operating without licenses.
