Session Highlight:  New York Session Pre-Open Briefing (1 Hr Before Open)

Session News Focus: Wall Street pre-market movers, US Federal Reserve news, mega-cap US stocks (NVDA, MSFT, TSLA), and WTI Crude Oil catalysts.

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- US Federal Reserve officials are signaling a likely pause in interest rate hikes for October, with Vice Chair Philip Jefferson indicating a need for more data assessment, shifting market expectations towards a December decision.
- Conversely, Dallas Fed President Lorie Logan has expressed the need for continued rate increases, potentially 50 basis points or more, to counter persistent inflation, influenced by rising U.S. Treasury yields and inflationary pressures.
- US 10-year Treasury yields have retreated from multi-decade highs (from around 5.34% to 5.25%) but remain elevated, affecting borrowing costs and the housing market.
- The Eurozone saw its annual inflation accelerate to 3.8% in September, exceeding expectations and maintaining pressure on the ECB for further rate hikes.
- The Indian Rupee weakened to a two-month low against the dollar, primarily due to rising global bond yields and crude oil prices, which intensified foreign capital outflows.

2. US & European Markets

- Wall Street concluded Thursday higher after a volatile session, with the S&P 500 up 0.2% and the Nasdaq Composite gaining 0.04%, largely due to easing Treasury yields.
- US stock futures are showing gains in pre-market trading today, with eased yields and oil prices ahead of the crucial September jobs report.
- AI chip stocks, including Nvidia (NVDA), Intel (INTC), Broadcom (AVGO), and AMD (AMD), are seeing pre-market increases following strong fiscal Q4 results and a positive outlook from Micron Technology, signaling robust demand for AI infrastructure. Nvidia (NVDA) was up 1.18% in pre-market.
- Nvidia (NVDA) reported strong Q3 earnings, surpassing EPS and revenue estimates with a 105.9% year-over-year revenue increase, and announced a $150 billion share-repurchase program. Analysts largely maintain a "Buy" rating, with Morgan Stanley reinstating NVDA as a Top Pick.
- Nike (NKE) shares experienced a significant pre-market tumble of 10.40% for the second consecutive day, driven by declining revenue and anticipated layoffs in 2027.
- The upcoming US non-farm payrolls report for September, expected to show a slowdown in job growth to approximately 90,000 and an unemployment rate of 4.1%, is a key market driver. A stronger report could reignite Fed tightening concerns, while a weaker one might further support equities.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- The Indian stock market is closed today, Friday, October 2, 2026, in observance of Mahatma Gandhi Jayanti, affecting equity, derivatives, and commodity segments.
- Prior to the holiday, Indian equities faced sustained selling pressure, with the Sensex and Nifty declining for four consecutive sessions through Thursday (Oct 1).
- On Thursday, the Sensex dropped 0.79% to 71,909.70, and the Nifty fell 0.88% to 22,421.95, with the Sensex hitting a fresh 52-week low during the session.
- Persistent foreign institutional selling, totaling over Rs 34,203.14 crore in five sessions through Wednesday, alongside rising crude oil prices (Brent crossing $100/barrel) and elevated bond yields, contributed to the market's decline.
- Indian markets recorded their longest weekly losing streak in 25 years.
- Despite the secondary market's performance, India's primary markets raised record funds in September 2026, with Indian firms securing $25 billion through equity offerings in H1 FY27, backed by strong domestic liquidity.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- WTI Crude Oil is currently pulling back below $91.00-$92.00, turning negative on the weekly chart, primarily due to increased oil flows from Gulf countries easing supply concerns.
- However, geopolitical risks, including the US deploying additional troops to the Middle East, continue to provide a floor for oil prices.
- WTI Crude Oil exhibits a bearish corrective structure, facing resistance near its 20-day moving average ($97.41) and key support at $91.20.
- Gold (XAU/USD) saw a 0.4% gain overnight, trading around $4,218.65 per ounce, but remains capped below $4,200 as traders await the US NFP report for potential Fed rate cut signals.
- Bitcoin (BTC) surged towards $85K-$86K, reaching a multi-month high, boosted by falling Treasury yields and reduced expectations for an October Fed rate hike. Bitcoin achieved a 42.7% gain in Q3, its strongest quarterly performance since Q1 2024.
- Ethereum (ETH) also performed strongly, gaining 70.8% in Q3, marking its strongest quarterly advance since Q1 2021.
- The broader crypto market is demonstrating a "risk-on" sentiment, with various altcoins, including Shiba Inu (SHIB), registering gains.
- Regulatory developments continue, with the CFTC filing crypto rules with the White House and the SEC allowing certain funds to hold their own crypto keys.

🎯 STRATEGY-BASED DAILY TICKER SELECTION & SECTOR CONSTRAINTS

Indian Equities & Options

Indian markets are closed today, October 2, 2026, for Mahatma Gandhi Jayanti. No trading opportunities for Indian Equities or Options.

US Equities

Ticker	Direction	Type	Strategy & Selection Reason
NVDA	Long	Large-Cap	Pre-market up 1.18% due to Micron's strong earnings outlook for AI infrastructure demand and recent analyst upgrades. Position for a potential 21-day EMA pullback bounce within a strong uptrend or a continuation of pre-market momentum.
NKE	Short	Large-Cap	Tumbled 10.40% in pre-market due to falling revenue and planned layoffs. This indicates significant negative sentiment. Initiate short on confirmation of 50-day SMA rejection or continued weakness below prior support.
AMOD	Long	Mid/Small-Cap	Alpha Modus Holdings showing significant pre-market gain of 82.05%. Potential for a High Relative Volume (RVOL > 2.0) breakout once market opens, indicating strong speculative interest.

Crypto Futures

Ticker	Direction	Type	Strategy & Selection Reason
BTC/USDT	Long	Large-Cap	Bitcoin is rising towards $85K-$86K, hitting multi-month highs, boosted by falling Treasury yields and reduced Fed hike expectations. Apply a 4H 21-EMA trend following strategy, targeting further upside in a risk-on crypto environment.
ETH/USDT	Long	Large-Cap	Ethereum also experienced strong Q3 performance (up 70.8%). Follow Bitcoin's positive sentiment and apply a 4H 21-EMA trend following strategy for continuation, anticipating a general altcoin rally.

Commodities

Ticker	Direction	Type	Strategy & Selection Reason
XAU/USD (Gold)	Long	Spot / Futures	Gold gained overnight, with easing Treasury yields and potential Fed pause supporting. Position for a long trade on a break above immediate resistance (e.g., $4220) towards Fibonacci extension levels if the US NFP report is softer than expected.
WTI Crude Oil	Short	Futures	WTI is pulling back below $91.00-$92.00 due to increased Gulf supply, easing disruption concerns. Despite geopolitical risks, the near-term technical outlook is bearish. Initiate a short position on a rejection of minor resistance or pivot levels (e.g., around $92.50) targeting $90.00 and lower support.

Forex Futures

Ticker	Direction	Type	Strategy & Selection Reason
EUR/USD	Long	Short-Term	Eurozone inflation accelerating puts pressure on ECB for hikes. USD likely to soften if NFP is weak and Fed pause expectations firm up. Look for an opening range breakout long following the NFP release, targeting short-term resistance.
AUD/USD	Long	Macro Carry Swing	AUD/USD is bouncing back as the USD retreats ahead of NFP. A softer NFP could further weaken the USD, supporting a long carry swing trade. Look to enter on sustained strength, targeting a break above 0.6950 towards higher resistance.
