Daily Multi-Asset Trading Blueprint & Level Execution Manual

Date: October 3, 2026

Session: New York Session Pre-Open Briefing (1 Hr Before Open)

Focus: Wall Street pre-market movers, US Federal Reserve news, mega-cap US stocks (NVDA, MSFT, TSLA), and WTI Crude Oil catalysts.

SECTION 0: DAILY MACRO & FINANCIAL NEWS DIGEST

1. Global Macro & Central Banks

- The Federal Reserve may skip an October rate hike after September saw just 29,000 new jobs added, significantly below expectations of 90,000. However, a December hike remains on the table given persistent inflation and a strong job market in terms of low layoffs.
- Fed Chairman Kevin Warsh is expected to raise interest rates again to combat sticky inflation, defying calls for lower rates.
- The Federal Reserve Board extended the comment period for its proposal to modernize Regulation O until November 4, impacting rules governing credit extensions to bank insiders.
- Sovereign bond yields are rising across most developed markets, with no clear consensus on the driving factors behind the global bond sell-off.
- The global economy remains resilient despite war tensions and soaring energy costs, with AI-driven investment and productivity gains helping offset inflation. Central banks are increasingly diverging on policy.

2. US & European Markets

- Nvidia (NVDA) has hit an all-time high, with strong demand for high-bandwidth memory driving shares up significantly over the past year due to AI data center rollout.
- Microsoft (MSFT) stock is trading around $518, near its record high, leading to speculation about a potential stock split after 23 years.
- Tesla (TSLA) continues to be a key founder-led stock to watch, with Elon Musk's vision shaping ambitious and speculative opportunities like AI leadership and robotaxis.
- Wall Street is preparing for a busy week with Fed minutes, unemployment data, and consumer sentiment updates, which will provide further insight into inflation and the job market.
- Manufacturing's share of new projects fell in H1FY27, while services rose, led by information technology investments.
- The G7 countries have agreed to release 100 million barrels from emergency oil reserves over four months to address surging prices and volatility in global energy markets, particularly diesel.

3. Indian Markets & Dalal Street

- Indian markets have experienced continued weakness, with the Nifty and Sensex extending declines due to rising crude oil prices, geopolitical concerns, and sustained selling by foreign institutional investors (FIIs).
- The Indian rupee weakened to around ₹96.3 against the US dollar, while crude oil prices moved back above $100 per barrel, raising concerns about India's import bill and inflation.
- Rising US Treasury yields are adding pressure on emerging-market assets, contributing to continued foreign fund outflows from India.
- Bajaj Finance's board approved fundraising of up to ₹17,500 crore through a QIP and warrants.
- India's crude oil imports reached a yearly high in September, supported by stronger Gulf supplies.
- India can sustain around 7% growth despite global concerns, but rising oil prices and inflation are key headwinds.

4. Commodities & Crypto Wire

- WTI Crude Oil is priced at $96.16 a barrel, with geopolitical disruptions continuing to shape supply and price outlook. However, other reports indicate WTI trading near $89.73 per barrel, having eased over 4% in 5 days, while Brent hovers below $100. The G7's decision to release emergency oil reserves aims to ease surging fuel prices.
- Geopolitical tensions, including reports of Iran striking an oil tanker off Oman in the Strait of Hormuz, are impacting the oil market. Exports from the Persian Gulf are near pre-war levels, but volumes remain volatile.
- Gold supply/demand drivers are influenced by global macro factors, including inflation and central bank policies.
- The US SEC plans to roll out additional regulatory proposals for crypto assets, with Chair Paul Atkins stressing that the comprehensive framework for the sector is "not finished." The SEC's new crypto custody proposal aims to make it easier for investment advisers and regulated funds to hold crypto assets for clients.
- Community banks have filed a lawsuit against a US regulator over crypto firm charters, raising concerns about rigorous regulatory frameworks.
- Bitcoin's price was down nearly 2% during the past 24 hours amid the SEC's crypto custody proposal.
